A VISIT TO CAMP DEVENS

An Eye-witness Describes the Camp. Andover Boys Interviewed and Found Generally Happy. A Few Additional Articles Needed for Their Comfort.

The Townsman representative had the privilege of visiting Camp Devens, Wednesday. In a brief space the camp and all that it means, beggars description. After a tour of inspection of the buildings and examination of the conditions and needs of the boys, it was evident that in the short time since the starting of the camp everything possible was being done for their comfort. The Andover boys were interviewed and expressed themselves as satisfied with their condition. No cases of sickness had appeared among them. The food was good and well prepared, a sample menu being printed below. The one matter of heat was the only reason for criticism they offered, and being assured this would be taken up by the Public Safety Committee of Andover, they felt they were favored beyond many from other towns. An original poem by one of the Andover boys is found in another column of this issue.

The first thing apparent to a visitor to the Camp is the great change which has taken place in the last few months. In less than four months a more or less thickly wooded stretch of country has been transformed into a city with a population of nearly 50,000.

A TRIBUTE TO THE FLAG

I have seen the glories of art and architecture and of river and mountain. I have seen the sunset on the Jungfrau and the moon rise over Mont Blanc. But the fairest vision on which these eyes rested was the flag of my country in a foreign port. Beautiful as a flower to those who love it, terrible as a meteor to those who hate it, it is the symbol of the power and the glory and the honor of one hundred millions of Americans.—George F. Hoar

The committee of which Mr. Spring is chairman, will make a concerted effort in these districts to secure a large subscription to this second bond issue. According to recent newspaper reports New England is falling down in this second issue and every effort will be made to make Andover the banner town in New England. A systematic division of Andover was made into seven districts and seven captains were appointed for these districts. BOSTON THEATRES

PARK SQUARE

Jane Cowl in "Lilac Time" begins its last week at the Park Square Theatre, next Monday. The tremendous success won by this play emphasizes the many great predictions made for it. It is a play of exceptional charm with a story particularly timely. Its locale is France in the early days of the war. The atmosphere is perfectly presented of conditions in a town back of the front, yet the clash of conflict is never present. Instead there is presented the engrossing story of a young daughter of France who falls in love with one of the English officers billeted in her home. Miss Cowl is revealed as a comedienne of unusual capability, and it is in the big emotional scenes she exhibits a power of expression which has not been excelled by an American actress within memory. There will be no New England engagement of the play.

The attraction to follow at this theatre beginning October 22, will be Cohan and Harris' production of "Captain Kidd, Jr.," the phenomenally successful comedy written by Rida Johnson Young which played all of last season in New York. This comedy is described as a play of youth, love and adventure, possessing the spontaniety of youth, the appealing charm of sympathetic young love, and the inspiriting excitement of adventure with the lure of pirate treasure trove as its goal. It is a [illegible] of [illegible] da[illegible] its [illegible] st sc[illegible] New [illegible]k an[illegible]bsed [illegible]t ca[illegible] i[illegible]w Eng[illegible]d co[illegible] tow[illegible] A [illegible]t cast of play[illegible] wi[illegible] the [illegible]medy. [illegible]ts will [illegible]on [illegible] Tues[illegible], [illegible]tober 16, [illegible] advance [illegible] orders [illegible] [illegible]alled now.

GLOBE

The play selected by the resident stock company at the Globe Theatre next week is Edgar Selwyn's comedy of youth, love and adventure, "Rolling Stones." This tremendous success of two [illegible]o [illegible]ently [illegible]ich depends upon no particular period for timeliness. It is adapt in application to-day as it will be in a century from now. For it reports the adventures of two runaway [illegible]oulder school [illegible]ns, [illegible] neglected, and reveals their contradictory right to woo the fickle goddess.

The story concerns two young men who meet when they are both in desperate situations because of their low financial condition leading them to rob on the highway. Each holds up the other, but upon learning the similarity of their conditions, the quirk of circumstances leads them to resolve to [illegible]g out together.

When the success of the rolling stones seem to be at its highest and the future of the brightest, it is then that fate takes its last desperate fling at the pair, apparently tumbling down their whole castle. But the courage of youth does not fail them, and they fight it out with the result that they win in contravention to the old adage which concerns the gathering of no moss.

Robert Le Sueur and Ted Brack play the pair of rolling stones, and Mary Fray and Helen Spring will have the roles of their opposites.

Matinees will be given on Wednesday-Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

SHUBERT

Crowned with the laurels of having scored the longest Broadway run of any of the score of memorable spectacular extravaganzas that have been launched as that nationally famous institution of theatrical innovation, the New York Winter Garden's annual revue of revelry, music, mirth and color, the "Passing Show of 1917" [illegible]reg[illegible]d intact from a seven months' season in Manhattan, will arrive at the Shubert Theatre, next Monday, October 15, for its annual visit, which this season because of unalterable book [illegible]arrangements, must be limited to three weeks. Liveliest, most ingenious, entertaining and brilliant of recent musical productions, the "Passing Show of 1917" is the Winter Garden supreme achievement to date in its own distinctive field of lavish and massive spectacle. It has proved by far the most enjoyable contemporaneous revue and its case contains the most colossal collection of celebrated comedians yet corraled for one company. In this extraordinary entertainment, "a tremendous toot on travesty's trumpet," there are twenty-two swiftly paced scenes and more than thirty musical numbers. Two remarkable spectacular surprises are a Yale-Harvard football game in the Yale Bowl, with a representation of seventy thousand cheering spectators watching the contest, which is the first act finale, and a gorgeous pageant, "Ring Out Liberty", utilizing the Statue of Liberty as a background.

Matinees will be given Wednesdays and Saturdays.

COPLEY

With its mingling of comedy and drama, "The Man Who Stayed at Home" is continuing its triumph at the Copley Theatre. It makes a direct appeal to the ideas that are uppermost in the mind of the public at this present war-time hour, in its plot and its characters it brings to life the very things they are writing and talking about. Its dramatic personae are all very much alive and its story involves a mystery that is both realistic and startling. It gives a faithful series of pictures of German intrigue and the German spy system as they were operated in England at the beginning of the war.

No small part of its favor is due to the Henry Jewett Players, who give to every second and every act a highly interesting and striking performance. Its popularity is still so great that the end of its run is not yet in sight. Afternoon performances are given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and tickets may be purchased at Filene's or Jordan's as well as at the box office.

HOLLIS STREET

There are, probably, many men in Boston who have never kissed a cook. That is all because of the prevalence of fireless cookers, gas ranges and things in cans. Also it may be because of the cooks. Seeing Ruth Chatterton at the Hollis Street Theatre last week in her tidy pink apron and her lovely flushed face bending over a kitchen range is quite enough to make every woman go home and throw all her books on "feminism" out of the window while she herself takes a cook-book and goes "out to the kitchen."

Has anybody noticed that as kitchens go more out of practical use—and who in this day of modern apartment buildings can deny it—they are coming into their own on the stage. And such kitchens as those lovely old Southern ones with shining brasses, glowing ranges and blue and white dishes on the dresser.

Bruce McRae, one of the most brilliant and polished of players, puts a lot of humanity into the role of the rich Burton Crane, and other parts are all well played. Scenically and atmospherically the play must please theatregoers as a bouquet of fragrant old-fashioned garden flowers would appeal to the seasoned city dweller.

"A Daughter of the Gods"

In "A Daughter of the Gods," William Fox's $1,000,000 picture beautiful, there is much to please the children as well as the grown folks, for in the making its creator considered the little ones, knowing that that which pleased the youngsters must also appeal to the parents.

In one of the big scenes, the Country of the Gnomes, a fairy-like representation of their mythical kingdom is shown with all the faithfulness of detail that marks elsewhere in this famous picture the master hand of Fox. It is an enchanted setting for Annette Kellerman, the "most perfect woman in the world."

Amid tropical foliage and under a raging mountain torrent can be seen the little creatures who play so important a part in this last word in filmed story. To create the effect of the mountain stream, Mr. Fox found it necessary to divert a river from its source, but never daunted either as to the gigantic nature of the task, or the cost attendant upon the same, he sent to New York for a company of the best engineers to be had.

This one item represented the outlay of a small fortune and gives a small idea to what extremes Mr. Fox went to make "A Daughter of the Gods" the scenic sensation of the century.

Engineers and naval and military representatives of the British Government at Kingston, Jamaica visited the location several times and expressed their surprise at the undertaking which, to a man, they described as one of the most remarkable pieces of engineering ever attempted by an individual.

The engagement at the Colonial Theatre, Essex street, Wednesday and Thursday, October 17, and 18, will positively close on the date originally set as outstanding contracts with other cities must be filled.

Fruit Eating as a Water Supply

Most fruits contain from 75 to 95 per cent water, and a balance of woody fiber or cellulose, fruit sugar and minerals. Thus the free use of fruit daily insures a greater supply of water to the body, says the Popular Science Monthly.

The cellulose of the fruit supplies bulk and a mechanical stimulation which promotes waste elimination. Acid fruits, such as oranges, lemons, limes and most berries, contain a certain chemical compound called "vitamines," in a very stable form. These vitamines are believed to purify the blood and to prevent scurvy and various skin diseases.—Webster Times.

Ghosts

There are no ghosts, you say,
To haunt her blaze of light;
No shadows in her day,
No phantoms in her night;
Columbus' tattered sail
Has passed beyond her hail?

What? On that magic coast,
Where Raleigh fought with fate;
Or where that Devon ghost
Unbarred the Golden Gate,
Saw you no strange bronzed men
Beat in from sea again?

Must all those dead lie still?
Must not the night disgorge
The ghosts of Bunker Hill,
The ghosts of Valley Forge,
Or England's mightier son,
The ghost of Washington?

No ghosts where Lincoln fell?
No ghosts for seeing eyes?
I know an old cracked bell
Shall make ten million rise,
When his immortal ghost
Calls to the slumbering host.

How to Keep Silver Bright

Silver that is not used regularly will soon tarnish. A small piece of gum camphor wrapped and placed in with the silver will help to keep it from tarnishing.

YOU MUST WIN THE WAR BUY A BOND

LETTERS FROM FRANCE

By Mrs. Marlborough Churchill

Paris, September 4, 1917.

Well, the hard break has come and past; Marlborough is at the Front, and I am adjusting myself to life here without him. It was not easy to have him go, as you well know, and this war is not a simple thing for any one to face, but everything is by comparisons. And compared to the suffering about me, I have not a thing to even speak of, in simply separation, when we are well, and all busy.

I am not worrying about his discomforts for I think he is about to live in a marvelous chateau! In a letter I received this morning, he said he saw practically everybody we know in the Army, and when he goes to Artillery Headquarters I hope to hear particulars of everybody.

Mollie has been working with me mornings and playing tennis in the afternoons. She is looking wonderfully well, and if you can believe it, I am not quite half a head taller than she is.

Life is certainly a curious thing these days, but I am happy that we can feel that our Government has been "on the job" since we came into this fray, and the best part is they have certainly guarded a great deal from the press. They have said little but evidently things are happening all the time, and our first big force is under intensive training at the Front here.

I am still at my old job, and shall stick to it as long as they need me, and as long as the work goes on in the same way. The Red Cross has not taken it over yet, and work is going on there in full force, yet handicapped by lack of girls, for until we know whether the Red Cross is to take it over, we cannot send for girls from this end.

To-day came a rush order for two hundred cases of dressings for Roumania, so with the regular work it has been [illegible] hectic day. And when I [illegible] home for luncheon, I found that my maids were in great state of excitement. A few days ago my cook heard that her niece, sixteen years old, had been left in some little town which the Germans have recently evacuated. It has been impossible to get into communication with her, to tell her where her mother was, and that her father was still fighting for France, and well. Although we couldn't reach her by letter, we could write her father she had been found although nothing has been heard of her sister.

Yesterday the father was liberated from service and sent back to work in the mines, for he was a miner by trade. He happened to go through Lyon, and while there, just passing through, he heard his daughter had just been sent to Lyon by the Government. He went where the refugees were and found her, and brought her here to Clemence. So when I came in, the poor old father and daughter were sitting in the kitchen, neither able to do much more than weep, their joy was so great.

The girl had absolutely nothing in the world but the clothes she had on her back so I knew I must find a coat and hat for her. My own wardrobe is a "war wardrobe" which I assure you is pretty nearly bare necessities. However I did have two suits, which hardly seems extravagant, for one can't stay in bed while one suit is being pressed! But when Mollie said, "Mother that girl needs it more than you do," that was enough.

So with the last New York suit I have, and a small black hat, and a pretty white blouse I had given Mollie, but she said was too large for her, we made the girl very happy.

One couldn't grasp what a horror the last three years must have been to that child. Death cannot be half as hard to bear as the mental agony and heartache for those whose children have been carried away.

With the few sous a day, the French poilu gets, and the child penniless, you [illegible] saw [illegible] the amount of money they had between them. They had a luncheon [illegible] in the Champs [illegible] and the poor old man [illegible] only [illegible] besides weeping, and that was to take her to the mother. So thanks to —— I gave him some money, and they left this afternoon for a little town out near Belfort.

We are in fine health and spirits, and interested beyond words in this wonderful life around us.

How to Make Grape Juice

When red juice is desired, the crushed grapes should first be heated to a temperature of not more than 200 degrees Fahrenheit, then strained through a clean cloth or drip bag, no pressure being used, and set away to cool and settle. The remaining prodecure is the same for the red as for the light-colored juice.

Many people do not even take the trouble to let the juice settle after it is strained, simply reheating and sealing the vessels and setting them away in an upright position in a cool place where they will be undisturbed. If bottles are used, the corks should be sterilized and the necks of the bottles sealed with sealing wax. The juice settles and when desired for use, the clear liquid is poured off the sediment.

Any person familiar with the process of canning fruit can put up grape juice, for the principles involved are the same. Care should be taken not to sterilize the juice at a temperature higher than 195 degrees Fahrenheit, or the finished product will have a scorched taste.

The bottles or jars should not be so large that when they are opened the juice will spoil before it can be used. Unfermented grape juice, properly made and bottled, will keep indefinitely if not exposed to the atmosphere or to infection from mold germs; when a bottle is once opened, however, the contents, like canned goods generally should be used as soon as possible.

Will Not Grumble

The schools of Iowa have adopted a pledge for the children, by the terms of which each child promises not to find fault with the food which is set before him while the country is at war. If the child does not observe the pledge he agrees to fine himself one penny for each offense, the money to be paid into the school fund for the aid of Belgian children.

Field Day To-morrow

The Field Day for to-morrow is more than a local affair in that companies are to have a part in it coming from not only Andover, but Lawrence, Methuen, and Reading. The prize drill will be interesting and the sideshows in the way of numerous kinds of athletic contests will help to make a full afternoon of entertainment.

We are not likely to have many holidays or very many free Saturdays in the next year in which some sort of a public [illegible] to help [illegible] of the [illegible] and big [illegible] the direct [illegible] indirect taxes [illegible] promise to [illegible] a "mickle" [illegible] a "mickle" be added to [illegible] other [illegible] the [illegible] call [illegible] the people.

Editorial Cinders

The idea of having the Republican state convention at Springfield, marked an innovation but resulted in giving the group [illegible] assembled there [illegible] the attention [illegible] city and set at [illegible] environments [illegible] but without [illegible] that [illegible] of the state [illegible] convention itself was [illegible] that was to be expected with the two United States Senators having the central positions in its direction. High statesmanship and good, clear-headed consideration of the big national matters made the keynote upon which Massachusetts Republicans are to carry on their campaign this year. Governor McCall utters the timely word in calling attention to the enormous taxes which are even now burdening the people and which promise to be so much greater in the coming year, and while we are not likely to have as much discussion from the chief executive as we might wish, this is pretty sure to be his central theme whenever he does take up campaign problems. Even now the public pretty well understands that war is an expensive luxury, but they are far from reaching the high spot.

***

It looks as if they were making a little progress at last in the constitutional convention. In the three weeks that remain for consideration and discussion of the four amendments which are to go upon the ballot at the coming election, there will have to be some pretty active campaigning if the public is to know what it is to vote upon, or to determine intelligently what is wise in connection with these particular matters. It is to be hoped that this period of time for discussion isn't to be taken as an illustration of the "full and free" discussion which the Initiative and Referendum advocates promise shall be given to such matters when they begin to cumber the Massachusetts ballot under their form of legislation [illegible] congresses, [illegible] are fortunate [illegible] a much less [illegible] of the part Initiative [illegible] Referendum [illegible] by, and any Initiative and Referendum amendment [illegible] dangerous than that which was originally advocated by Massachusetts freakdom when the discussion began.

***

The drive for the second Liberty Loan is on with a vengeance, and Andover is thoroughly aroused to do its [illegible] And [illegible] is [illegible] of [illegible] the movement [illegible] has been [illegible] for Andover [illegible] and North [illegible] Andover's ex[illegible] committee [illegible] by Mr. [illegible] Daniels [illegible] anybody can [illegible] in charge can do so. The work has been carefully organized under the direction of Mr. Flagg, team captains appointed, and a house to house canvass is to be carried on in Andover and North Andover, so that if anyone does not subscribe it will not be the fault of the committee. But can anyone really afford not to subscribe in the light of the present need? The literature published here shows the willingness of the [illegible] to help and sets forth the [illegible] arguments. Your bit must be done!

***

It is not too early to be thinking of Christmas gifts for the boys at the front, as so clearly set forth in the news column. The Red Cross in Andover offer the very best possible medium for attending to the many details necessary to having [illegible] gifts reach the proper destination at the proper time. Andover has a lot of boys to be considered and the time to consider them for this bit of holiday cheer is right now.

Respect the Children

Don't call the children kids. A kid is a goat, and, while goats are all right in their way, children are better. The dictionary says "kid" applied to a child is slang. And so it is. It depreciates the child. There is no sense in taking away the dignity of a child by calling him an animal. We must keep up the human relation, where respect, sympathy, love, dwell. The older people may overlook the false appellation, but it stays with the child and makes him feel, after all, that he is only a little goat and that his fond delight is in eating old rags and paper boxes. Really the child is an angel rather than a goat and is entitled to the sweet considerations that belong to a human being, and if he does not get these it is very likely he will be a sort of goat all his life. So drop the "kid" vocabulary and give the child every chance to be a true human.—Columbus State Journal.

Phillips Academy Loses First Game

Cushing Academy won the first game of the season over Phillips Academy, by a score of 7 to 6. Although Phillips was defeated there is good material on the squad, which merely requires development to make a winning team.

Avery was placed at center for the first half and did splendid work for the home team, but his displacement by Tison in the second proved serious, as Cushing made greater gains after the change. The game was won by Cushing in the last three minutes of the game. Stammers made a run of 48 yards around Andover's right end. His superior speed enabled him to gain ground on the Andover men.

Andover's chance with Exeter is small as the latter has been coached for three weeks and is in good condition. Coach Quinby of Phillips will doubtlessdevelop the material so that a respectable showing will be made.

The lineup and score follows:

Communication

In a leader in the Boston T anscrip for October 8, it appears somehow that our farewell procession for our boys on Friday last was placed to the credit of North Andover, and the celebration in both towns was "made the occasion of a plea for Liberty Bonds that was very effective. Speeches were made by Governor McCall, Wells of the Senate, and a Johnson from somewhere, who talked both at North Andover and over here on the Liberty Loan, and the exercises were repeated at Andover where about 6000 people witnessed the departure of the troops—and many subscriptions were taken in both places after the exercises ended."

I did not go up to the playstead and shall have to rely on the Townsman's report for the speeches. Now many who do not agree with our efficient chairman of Public Safety have said that they would have enjoyed greatly one of his usual joyful shouts, also the voice of many other fine speakers; like Principal Stearns of Phillips, voices dear to Andover ears on all our solumn occasions. Why should a Bray of Georgetown preside over an Andover sendoff. Or a Mr. Lellan from somewhere call the roll of our boys of the two parishes. Why not Samuel Stevens or some active patriot over here have done this. It was no time to butt in with an [illegible] opinion [illegible] the report [illegible] can be relied upon. Post-Office Christmas Notice

Washington, D.C., Oct. 3, 1917

To the Public:—

The time is approaching to give thought to bringing Christmas cheer to the American soldiers and sailors abroad.

Arrangements have been perfected whereby the Christmas mail to the American Expeditionary Forces in Europe is to be delivered Christmas morning. Without the fullest co-operation on the part of the public it will be impossible to accomplish this result.

The three essential respects in which the public can aid in assuring a happy Christmas at the front are: Mail early, address intelligently, and pack securely. For this reason it is urgently requested that all persons having Christmas mail for the soldiers and sailors and civilian units attached to the army in Europe observe closely the following directions:

1. Mails to reach the soldiers in France by Christmas morning must be posted not later than November 15.

2. Every package must bear conspicuously the words "Christmas Mail," the complete address of the person for whom it is intended, and in the upper left-hand corner, the name and address of the sender.

3. Every parcel must be so packed and wrapped as to admit of easy inspection by the postmaster. No parcel will be dispatched to France which has not the postmaster's certificate that it contains no prohibited articles.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War

Unusual Visitors in Andover

Besides the usual ones who are reported in the Townsman as spending the whole or part of their vacations in our town, there are occasional visitors who stop only for a day or two, or perhaps only for an hour or two, but whose personal or historical associations are such as to justify brief notes about them.

One, a few weeks ago, was Mrs. D. I. Carson of Atlanta, Ga., an early friend of Mrs. Dr. Richards. She was a native of Connecticut, and a great-granddaughter of David Hale, brother of Nathan Hale, the famous young patriot-martyr of the Revolution. Mrs. Carson is—as her husband was—specially interested in the work of the Atlanta Theological Seminary among the young men of the Southland, and spoke very strongly of the high esteem in which Professor Shipman was held there, and the great regret that he felt obliged to close his service for the institution.

On the next day an automobile passed through with Professor Elkin of Yale University and Mrs. Elkin, the latter being a granddaughter of Dr. Daniel Adams, widely and honorably known as physician, school-teacher, and especially as author of famous old-time school-books, used in Massachusetts and New Hampshire in the first half of last century. She was much interested in seeing here a shelf of old-time school-books, including "Adams's New Arithmetic" (new in 1827), which the writer of these notes used a few years later, also a large, leather-bound copy of her grandfather's "Scholar's Arithmetic" 1801, having blank spaces on the pages on which my father had written with a quill [illegible] the "sum[illegible]s he had done [illegible]. That was in [illegible], evidently before the time of slate[illegible]d blackboards. One page is filled [illegible] "Pleasant and Diverting Question[illegible] not found i[illegible] our modern arithm[illegible]—for instance [illegible] A[illegible] was going t[illegible] Ives, I m[illegible] w[illegible]. Every wife had 7 sacks. Ev[illegible] sack had 7 [illegible]. Every cat h[illegible] 7 [illegible] Kit[illegible] and [illegible] were going to St. Ives?" What Punchard scholar can answer this first, and correctly? As Adam's arithmetics, like Morse's geographies, were once in very extensive use in New England, probably some old Andover boys and girls studied [illegible].

A [illegible] later another auto-car bro[illegible] Mr. George C. Whiteley, with a yo[illegible] son [illegible] same name, who came fro[illegible] the c[illegible] of Labrador—not all the [illegible] bi[illegible]! The family had been [illegible] that northern shore for three generations, the pioneer going out from Boston—although son of an Englishman—as a boy of fifteen in 1849. Mrs. Whiteley was descended from the old Cannings of Stratford-on-Avon, and a cousin of hers is the wife of F. H. [illegible], [illegible] position on the staff of General Pershing [illegible]ce. I [illegible] if he [illegible] met our [illegible] Harold Whiteley, [illegible] Lieutenant Colonel [illegible] Churchill, a[illegible] those delightful letters in the Townsman every week! The Whiteley home in the Straits of Belle Isle is "Bonne Esperance," near which the early "Labrador Mission" was located. So Dr. Grenfell, who began his [illegible] travels in [illegible] over twenty [illegible] at their islan[illegible] home, [illegible] was [illegible]ated to know [illegible] the d[illegible]ghter [illegible] family was coming to "t[illegible] for her educat[illegible] that being [illegible] Mrs. Whiteley's errand to Massachusetts to enter her at Northfield Seminary. It may be remembered that the now famous medical missionary received his first impulse to give his life work for oth[illegible] when as a [illegible] student i[illegible]m, h[illegible]g. Lo[illegible]n, he by a[illegible]dent st[illegible]ed [illegible] the evangelist's [illegible] [illegible] many exhortation[illegible] They did not [illegible] [illegible] but years afterward [illegible] [illegible] dged to each other in Bost[illegible] and [illegible] Chicago evangelist introduced the [illegible] [illegible]or doctor to an immense audience in [illegible] Tremont Temple. It see[illegible] therefore appropriate that the first girl from [illegible] Grenfell's coast, to [illegible] an ed[illegible] [illegible]

America, should come to Moody's [illegible] in Northfield. Perhaps our An[illegible] in attendance there will meet [illegible]udent from Northland!

[illegible]re "unusual visitor" may be [illegible]. Elizabeth W. Cheney of [illegible]sport, who made her first visit to Andover last week. She was the daughter of Joshua Coffin, the old-time historian of Newbury, and the schoolmaster of Whittier, in whose memory the Quaker poet wrote the beautiful [illegible] friend, kind and [illegible] [illegible] Dear time's snow-flakes [illegible] [illegible] Mrs. Cheney was accompanied by Miss Abbie Scott Rowell, who had this affinity with Andover, that she was a direct descendant of Agatha Chase, the old-time emigrant to Hampton and Newbury, who has [illegible] well known, [illegible] residents in Andover!

Roger Goes to Camp

In 1861 I saw the first New Hampshire regiment go off when I was teaching school at seventeen, in Concord, and I vowed never to repeat that heart rending xperience. But Friday morning ou[illegible] old friend Roger, who had returned to sit in his old appletree perch awhile, as his woodbine was in full glory—he came bounding int o get me to go down to the station to see if any boys he knew were in the company leaving town. He can't see nor hear unless I am eyes and ears for him. He feels the stir, however, and when a whole community are moved as we were on Friday, he had to know all about it.

He got me past the guard in a most disreputable way, under the rope to cling to a post where he could see all the faces of our boys. I knew few by name and those familiar, looked strange in their accounterment.

Olin Richardson he got, because he knew his ancestor old Captain Tom Marshall, whose oldest girl married our pioneer Robert Russell, and Captain Tom belonged to the "Ancient and Honorable" and was commissioner to the French Colonies before Roger left for French Canada in Philip's War. He recognized young Kenneth Foster, whose uncle, Joseph Abbott, fell a soldier in that war here in Andover, and whose way back Uncle Tom was fetched back by Roger's squaw from captivity. His Blanchard ancestor also had the garrison at Haggett's where tragic things happened. Hibbert he sent me to shake paws with because he had helped print the pictures of his beloved brook [illegible] colle[illegible] who was [illegible]ng the [illegible]long, he said was that [illegible] who liv[illegible]ross the road. [illegible] had [illegible]ractice s[illegible] the long [illegible]ays, [illegible]ence and [illegible]tud[illegible] his je[illegible] like a fine offic[illegible] Here [illegible] train [illegible]d and I [illegible] old [illegible]n. The [illegible] was invisible [illegible] the [illegible] of the b[illegible] car as it moved [illegible]y. [illegible] phantom [illegible] that he was off to Ayer and the War to stay with the boys as the third of the relief committee self appointed. So when in the bush around the camp you hear a rustle in the leaves or a patter like a squirrel and recall Andover hill, that is your friend Roger on guard and over to France or through Russia, wherever they send you there will Roger go too, till the long "hike" is over My superstitious friends ask me if I really have a "familiar" in the old fellow who lived here as a boy after long generations of fighting braves along the old Canada War path. I think there are some that will see he is no myth, but a real substantial thing—the loyal heart of Andover, Red or White, to all that belongs to our good. To the Past, Present [illegible] Whiting chose our [illegible] s[illegible] desi[illegible] wisely, and when we meet i[illegible] all and walk up over Roger's [illegible]ge[illegible] in the entrance, re[illegible]mbe[illegible] what [illegible] stands for—loyalty [illegible] Andover's good; and send along your wireless messages of good will to our lads. That is Roger's business at present to carry. C.H.A.

War Orders Rushed

THE magnitude of the great war in which we are now engaged, has necessitated unusual preparation. Mighty forces are marshalling, great stores of food and munitions are being gathered, and the energies of the nation are focused on problems incident to the war.

At the very beginning of the war, the whole Bell System was placed at the disposal of the Government. No nation has entered the war with such a comprehensive and efficient telephone service.

As our military establishment grows, the demands of the Government upon the Bell System are bound to increase and always they must take precedence over all others.

Increased activity in commerce and industry as the result of larger demands for food and munitions from our allies and for our own use, means more need of telephone service by private business.

But private business must always be subordinated to the Government service.

Each individual American will co-operate in this patriotic service, and submit cheerfully to inconvenience or delay in his telephone service, when he understands how vital it is that Government service shall take precedence over all else.

As our military establishment grows, the demands of the Government upon the Bell System are bound to increase and always they must take precedence over all others.

Increased activity in commerce and industry as the result of larger demands for food and munitions from our allies and for our own use, means more need of telephone service by private business.

But private business must always be subordinated to the Government service.

Each individual American will co-operate in this patriotic service, and submit cheerfully to inconvenience or delay in his telephone service, when he understands how vital it is that Government service shall take precedence over all else.
